The CSW63 Friends of the African Union Women's Manual

We issue this digital Friends of the African Union Women's Manual in dedication to the 50 years of United Nations work by Queen Mother Dr. Delois Fatima Blakely at the close of the sixty-third session of the Commission on the Status of Women (CSW63). CSW63 took place at the United Nations Headquarters 11 to 22 March 2019 with a Priority theme: Social protection systems, access to public services and sustainable infrastructure for gender equality and the empowerment of women and girls and a Review theme: Women's empowerment and the link to sustainable development.

It must be remembered that there is nothing more difficult to plan, more doubtful of success, nor more dangerous to manage than the creation of a new system.

For the initiator has the enmity of all who would profit by the preservation of the old institution and merely lukewarm defenders in those who would gain by the new ones.

— Machiavelli, "The Prince" 1513

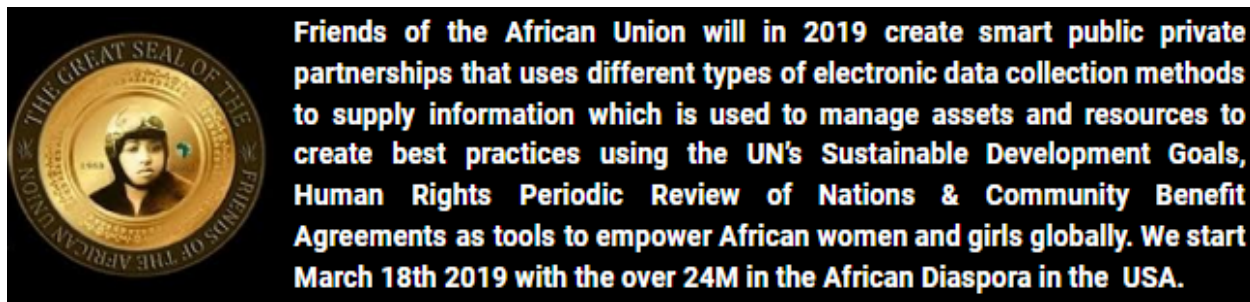

Sometimes it seem like to tell the truth today is to run the risk of being killed. But if I fall, I'll fall five feet four inches forward in the fight for freedom. I'm not backing off.

Public Release of Friends of the African Union on International Women's Day March 8th, 2019

This is a short post based on the theme "Think equal, build smart, innovate for change" used by the United Nations on International Women's Day 2019, today 8 March 2019. Friends of the African Union on International Women's Day, honored women of the African Diaspora worldwide for their vital role in shaping and strengthening our communities, families, governments, and businesses.

Friends of the African Union (FAU) celebrated their vision, leadership, and courage in the face of institutional sexism, and we reaffirmed our commitment to promoting equal opportunity for the over 800M African women and girls worldwide.

Friends of the African Union has, since 2015, championed initiatives to promote women's global economic and social empowerment through business, technology, and increased access to capital such as inclusion provisions in the $30B 5 year (2016-2020) bank based community benefit agreement we, FAU, have signed, as one of 136 organizations to do so.

Friends of the African Union, as a American Civil Society Organization established in 2012 will take advantage of initiatives of the US Government including the Women Entrepreneurs Finance Initiative, Canada–United States Council for Advancement of Women Entrepreneurs and Business Leaders, Overseas Private Investment Corporation's 2X Women's Initiative, and United States Agency for International Development's WomenConnect Challenge.

We are focused, at the Executive Level, with the National Security Presidential Memorandum that launched the Women's Global Development and Prosperity (W-GDP) Initiative. The W-GDP Initiative is structured to help at least 50 million women in developing countries fully and freely participate in their local economies by 2025. Our goal is leverage this US Federal Government's first integrated approach to global women's economic empowerment initiative our concentration on African and African Diasporian women in developing countries, including those in the Americas.

The W-GDP Initiative is meant to coordinate efforts with individuals in the private sector, civil society, diplomatic community, and Congress to promote workforce development and skills training, improve access to capital, and implement reforms that enable greater economic participation. FAU will focus our participation in W-GDP on making the workforce, in developing countries with African people (including African Diasporian), free of discrimination and injustice, using United Nation Womens' & other work, that results in safer, stronger, and freer environments.

To the reader,

Friends of the African Union (FAU) is an economic, social, humanitarian, charitable, educational and new media civil-society organization founded in 2012 to improve the lives of the people of the African diaspora and to support the work of the African Union, the 55-nation African equivalent of the European Union. In the years immediately following its formation, FAU participated in United States government meetings with African Nations, African Union meetings and consultations, and United Nations forums and conferences. It recruited allies (including Native American and African tribal groups), built an affiliate structure with national country bureaus, state assemblies, and local chapters, and lined up resources. FAU and its allies are signatories to a established 5 year (2016-2020) $30B bank-based Community Benefit Agreement.

This manual is a work created now after 400 years in the English Colonies as a solution to the results of the fundamental injustice, cruelty, brutality, and inhumanity of African slavery in the USA for 77 years (1788-1865) and the 168 years (1619 - 1787) in the progenitors to the 13 English colonies that made up the United States of America.

It proposes a solution called #2019BlackFolksPlan as to the effects subsequently de jure & de facto of racial & economic discrimination on the descendant Americans of America's African slavery as detailed in the Civil Society Organizations Friends of the African Union Concept Note for the 24th Session of the Working Group of Experts on People of African Descent that meets starting March 25th and lasts till March 29th 2019.

From our beginning 400 years ago on August 25th, 1619 at Old Point Comfort as Africans and then as African Americans (1868) we have played a vital role in the building of the USA and now it is time we rebuild our global community, first in the USA, then in unity with the African Diaspora and by 2020 in the Nations of the current African Union.

FAU recognizes that becoming Americans did not create economic opportunity, rather the laws and policy decisions passed by local, state, and federal governments actually promoted the discriminatory patterns that continue to this year in the practice of institutionalized racism on Americans of African Descent. The #2019BlackFolksPlan is to be a solution based on our work presented to the Working Group of Experts of People of African Descent in 2017 to provide a solutions to the practice of institutionalized racism in government and business on the descendant Americans of African heritage from 1868 through today and as important their effects subsequently de jure & de facto of that racial & economic discrimination.

Friends of the African Union is an economic, social, humanitarian, charitable, educational and new technology civil-society organization founded to work for the benefit of the people of the African Union and the African diaspora in their host countries.

Friends of the African Union (FAU) recognizes that the African Union, to date, is the only organization which has the structural and functional capacity to unite, and service the needs and aspirations of the more than 1.5 billion African people, globally.

FAU is organized around the action in 2005, when the African Union defined the African Diaspora as "... peoples of African descent and heritage living outside the continent, irrespective of their citizenship, and who remain committed to contribute to the development of the continent and the building of the African Union."

150 years of American citizenship may have been a flawed citizenship, as FAU recognizes that becoming Americans did not create equal economic opportunity, but now, in 2019, we have that chance if we unify and take advantage of the tools available to our $1.2 Trillion Dollar GDP

The Commission on the Status of Women (CSW) is the principal United Nations global intergovernmental body exclusively dedicated to the promotion of gender equality and the empowerment of women. A functional commission of the Economic and Social Council (ECOSOC), it was established by Council resolution 11\(II\) of 21 June 1946.

The CSW is instrumental in promoting women's rights, documenting the reality of women's lives throughout the world, and shaping global standards on gender equality and the empowerment of women.

In 1996, ECOSOC in resolution 1996/6 expanded the Commission's mandate and decided that it should take a leading role in monitoring and reviewing progress and problems in the implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action, and in mainstreaming a gender perspective in UN activities.

During the Commission's annual two-week session, this year ending today March 22, representatives of UN Member States, civil society organizations and UN entities gather at UN headquarters in New York.

They discuss progress and gaps in the implementation of the 1995 Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action, the key global policy document on gender equality, and the 23rd special session of the General Assembly held in 2000 (Beijing+5), as well as emerging issues that affect gender equality and the empowerment of women. Member States agree on further actions to accelerate progress and promote women's enjoyment of their rights in political, economic and social fields. The outcomes and recommendations of each session are forwarded to ECOSOC for follow-up.

The Commission adopts multi-year work programmes to appraise progress and make further recommendations to accelerate the implementation of the Platform for Action. These recommendations take the form of negotiated agreed conclusions on a priority theme. This year's themes are:

Priority theme: Social protection systems, access to public services and sustainable infrastructure for gender equality and the empowerment of women and girls and a

Review theme: Women's empowerment and the link to sustainable development.

The United Nations Women (UN Women) supports all aspects of the Commission's work. It also facilitates the participation of civil society representatives in the Commission's work.

At a side event during the 63rd session of the Commission on the Status of Women, youth leaders from 100 countries urged political leaders and senior UN officials to make strong commitments that safeguard and improve access to social protection, public services and sustainable infrastructure for women and girls, including young women and girls, worldwide. Equally important, they said, was to engage young people in shaping the solutions that affect their lives.

At the “Take the Hot Seat: A High-level Intergenerational Dialogue” event, organized by UN Women, the UN Secretary-General’s Special Envoy on Youth and youth partner organizations, youth participants presented a set of “common minimum standards” that emerged from the pre-CSW Youth Forum on 9 March. They posed questions to policy makers and Heads of State on how they propose to engage youth in policy discussions, improve social protection and public services for survivors of violence, and how they can ensure youth leadership in the implementation of the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action, which will mark its 25th anniversary in 2020. “We are here to ensure that our voices as young people are at the centre of conversations,” said Olaoluwa Abagun, founder of Girl Pride Circle, and moderator of the intergenerational dialogue.

The “Common Minimum Standards”, generated through discussion with over 500 young people from all over the world, represent the united voice of youth in demanding young people’s access to universal, rights-based social protection, public services and gender-sensitive infrastructure. The Common Minimum standards call for:

- Substantially increased investment in social protection, public services and sustainable infrastructure, ensuring effective linkages and synergies;
- Taking an integrated and holistic approach to social protection, as schemes are often short-term and change with political administrations, stifling progress;
- Ensuring that social protection systems, public services and sustainable infrastructure are universal, rights-based and fully provided to all young people regardless of gender, race, ethnic or social origin, religion, disability, sexual orientation or gender identity and;
- These systems address the complexity of the challenges that young people face today and incorporate a gender transformative approach that actively seeks to disrupt unequal gender norms and power inequalities, making sure that no one is left behind.

Geraldine Byrne Nason, Permanent Representative of Ireland and currently chairing the CSW, introduced the Common Minimum Standards during her introductory remarks to the CSW, calling on all governments to not only read them, but to bring them into policy discussions and negotiations.

“Power is not given, power is taken”

After hearing from many of the world's top women politicians on Tuesday in a session on “Women in Power”, Secretary-General António Guterres, held a Town Hall meeting for civil society activists where he underscored the importance of women seizing the initiative in the struggle for gender equality.

“The central question of gender equality is a question of power”, he stressed, noting that we continue to live in a male-dominated world with a male-dominated culture.

“Power is not given, power is taken”, he stressed, adding that “we have to push back” against the resistance to change “because people do not like power being taken”.

“We will only be successful if we are able to combine the institutional approaches, like the ones the UN develops, with the approaches at the civil society [level], the grassroots movements and the public opinion in general”, he elaborated.

In enumerating the UN's internal priorities, he listed the first as parity, telling the meeting that at the senior Under-Secretary-General (USG) and Assistant-Secretary-General (ASG) levels, “we are now at 53 per cent men and 47 per cent women, which means that we are in line to the commitment I made to reach full parity in senior management in 2021”, he stated.

He added that while there are 26 women and 16 men in senior management, peacekeeping remains a male-dominated field. “We need to have probably a majority of women in headquarters” at the USG and ASG level, he said, “to compensate for what is still a minority in the field, but we are making progress very quickly”, he explained.

Notwithstanding the progress at the top levels, where he can personally appoint women, he said he was aware of a “pushback” moving down the ranks. To remedy this, Mr. Guterres said he was encouraging all Member States to include gender as a criteria and vowed to keep pushing, adding that “the battle is enormous”.

On the margins of the 63rd session of the Commission on the Status of Women, UN Women and the International Olympic Committee (IOC) co-hosted the Women and Sport Awards celebrating the role models and change makers in advancing women and girls in and through sport. Introduced in 2000, the awards are given to individuals or organizations who have made remarkable contributions to the development, encouragement and reinforcement of women and girls participation in sport.

IOC President Thomas Bach highlighted the role that sport plays in development and women's empowerment, not only on the field, but also in other areas of society and in their personal development.

"Sport gives girls and women self-confidence," said IOC President Thomas Bach. Especially in countries where women's rights aren't a top priority yet, there's a tremendous benefit to women's and girls' participation in sport". He also described the IOC's work to empower women within the organization, including through increasing women's membership in the Commissions to 42 per cent, with the goal of reaching full equality in the future.

UN Women Executive Director Phumzile Mlambo-Ngcuka echoed Mr. Bach, agreeing on the off-the-field benefits that sport can have for girls, including learning leadership skills and teamwork. "Sport teaches team play, it teaches them to win and lose gracefully, they make friends for a lifetime, and of course, it improves their health."

“Accelerating the elimination of harmful practices to reap the demographic dividend in Africa”

On the margins of the 63rd session of the Commission on the Status of Women, a high-level side event on “Accelerating the elimination of harmful practices to reap the demographic dividend in Africa” convened Member States, civil society, youth and development partners to discuss decisive measures to eliminate child marriage and female genital mutilation (FGM) across the continent.

Often seen as traditional and cultural practices, female genital mutilation, and child, early and forced marriages are persisting human rights issues that affect women and girls in every region of the world. One in every five girls is married before reaching age 18, and more than 200 million women and girls alive today have been cut in 30 countries in Africa, the Middle East and Asia, where FGM is most common. According to recent UNFPA data, as many as 68 million girls globally may be at risk of FGM by 2030. The side event organized by the Governments of Burkina Faso, Canada, Italy and Zambia, in partnership with UNICEF, UNFPA and UN Women, provided a platform for sharing actions taken so far and renewing partnerships between governments and other development actors to accelerate progress towards ending these harmful practices.

Speaking at the event, UNICEF Executive Director Henrietta Fore stressed the importance of partnerships and commitment to end FGM and child marriage. “There is a real sisterhood between UN Women, UNICEF and UNFPA, so if UN can connect as one and if all can help, we can aid the countries that are in need,” she said. “The African Union’s outreach to young people is exceptional and it will probably be the turning point that will change Africa, if we can all do it together and do it right.”

UN Women Executive Director Phumzile Mlambo-Ngcuka also stressed joint programming and the need to address poverty and bolster women’s economic empowerment. UN Women has worked with UNFPA and UNICEF to develop policy guidance and a training module on gender equality and female genital mutilation, which can be used by development practitioners working toward eliminating FGM in places where it’s most prevalent.

Friends of the African Union is a member of the US Human Rights Network

The idea of the US Human Rights Network was seeded by feminists, primarily women of color, who came together in Milbank, CA to strategize on ways strengthen the human rights community and movement in the United States. Following that initial meeting, USHRN was officially formed in 2003 after a series of meetings involving more than sixty of the most prominent and influential human rights and social justice activists in the United States.

A key gathering, the U.S. Human Rights Leadership Summit "Ending Exceptionalism: Strengthening Human Rights in the United States," held July 12-14, 2002 at Howard University Law School, brought together leading activists from a variety of different disciplines and issue areas to assess human rights work in the United States and identify ways to strengthen the domestic human rights agenda. The Summit broke new ground, fostering dialogue and strategic thinking across issue areas as well as sectors of work. It was the first time that many of these visionary activists had come together to discuss an emerging U.S. human rights movement.

The Summit generated tremendous energy and excitement. Summit participants agreed that a "network" would be the most useful way to enable a broad array of organizations and individuals to work collaboratively to strengthen human rights efforts in the United States, thus the genesis of the US Human Rights Network.

CSW63 and the US Human Rights Network.

Owing to the US Human Rights Network's generous support from the Libra Foundation and Foundation for a Just Society, nine Network members will be attending CSW63 at the United Nations in New York. These nine women are not only human rights defenders; they are frontline activists, community leaders, students, professors, mothers, daughters, and sisters.

This CSW63 delegation includes Dr. Yolande Tomlinson who is Co-Founder and Director of Education and Applied Intersectionality for the Organization for Human Rights and Democracy, Yolande develops national and international strategies for the organization. She also serves on the Board of Directors for the Georgia Women's Action for New Directions, and previously worked for the US Human Rights Network (USHRN) as our National Education Coordinator.

USHRN Delegation to CSW63 –Statement on the Status of Women and Girls

Drawn from the statement of USHRN on March 21st 2019 - “.....In January 2016, The United Nations Working Group of Experts on People of African Descent stated, “The colonial history, the legacy of enslavement, racial subordination and segregation, racial terrorism, and racial inequality in the US remains a serious challenge as there has been no real commitment to reparations and to truth and reconciliation for people of African descent.”

Moreover, Black women and girls experienced unique forms of discrimination under these systems and practices. Taken from their homelands, they were subjected to both forced manual labor and forced reproductive labor, to birth the next generation of enslaved people. The implications of this nexus of labor and its legacy in current experiences of gender-based oppression must be acknowledged and effectively accounted for in any efforts to remedy these violations of black women, girls, and femmes’ human rights here in the US.

The number of women incarcerated in the U.S. increased by 800% over the last three decades. Black women are three times more likely than white women to be incarcerated.

Black children makeup 24% of the foster care population but comprise only 14% of the US child population. Black children are diagnosed with higher rates of mood/psychotic and behavior/conduct disorders linked to prescribing antipsychotic medications.

Black women are more than three times as likely to die during childbirth than are white women, according to the Centers for Diseases and Preventions.

Indigenous Peoples:

It is the US government’s obligation to respect and protect the sovereignty and existence of indigenous peoples as a peoples with distinct cosmovisions than those of dominant society. Not only have indigenous peoples retained distinct social, cultural, economic and political characteristics that differ from dominant society, but they have also retained distinct spiritual connections and responsibilities to culturally significant territories, waters, plants, animals and sacred sites.

We continue to see the ongoing threat and direct desecration of sacred sites such as the proposed construction of a 30-meter telescope on top of the sacred mountain, Mauna Kea in Hawaii, and the proposed raising of the Shasta Dam which would result in the cultural genocide of the Winnemem Wintu peoples of Mt. Shasta in Northern California.

It is essential to have free, prior and informed consent from indigenous peoples who are protecting and revitalizing their distinct cultural practices and lifeways, and to protect the waters, territories and animals essential to the continuance of indigenous cultures. Protecting the spiritual rights, cultural and natural resources of indigenous peoples is essential for the spiritual and cultural survival of indigenous peoples all over the world. Indigenous peoples must be given the resources and support to live out indigenous economies, and indigenous educational systems free from harmful eurocentric cultural models to ensure the continuance and survival of indigenous cosmovisions for the next seven generations."

Readout of the USHRN Statement on Women and girls of African Descent at the 63rd Commission on the Status of Women Mar 14, 2019 by Dr. Yolande Tomlinson

The US human rights network thanks the Commission on the Status of women (CSW) for the opportunity to address the 63rd session on the thematic area of social justice systems, access to public services and sustainable infrastructure for gender equality and empowerment of women and girls.

We are founded and led by feminists of color and we comprise a network of approximately 300 organization and thousands of individuals. We work to strengthen human rights movement and culture within the United States and we are led by people who are most directly impacted by human rights violations and as such work to secure dignity and justice for all.

We appreciate the framing of this session on African descendant women and girls within the lens of intersectionality. And I would also like to point out a key area of intersectionality is worth noting for the following statement:

The power of intersectionality is not only recognizing the multiple and overlapping oppressions that black women and girls suffer as a function of race, gender, sexuality and class, but the power of and critical element of it is also recognizing that those people who are directly affected by these multiple overlapping oppressions must also be the leaders and the orchestrators of the solutions to those human rights violations.

And so with due respect to my colleague who initially reference the statement of the US Human Rights Network, the US Human Rights Network and black women and girls will speak for ourselves.

In January, 2016 The United Nations Working Group of Experts on People of African descent stated that the colonial history, the legacy of enslavement, racial subordination and segregation, racial terrorism, and racial inequality in the United States remains a serious challenge as there has been no real commitment to reparations and to truth and reconciliation for people of African descent.

Moreover, black women and girls experience unique forms of discrimination under these systems and practices. Taken from our homelands, we were subjected to both forced manual labor and forced sexual and reproductive labor, essentially to birth the next generation of enslaved people.

The implication of this nexus of labor and its legacy and current experiences of gender-based oppression must be acknowledged and effectively accounted for in any effort to remedy these violations of black women, girls and femmes, the human rights violations by the United States.

These legacies continue to plague black women and girls in areas of mass incarceration, in the foster care system, in education, in meaningful and well-paying work, healthcare and reproductive care, violence at home, work and in the public spaces and in accessing relevant and sustainable social services.

Women and girls in the area of criminal punishment

The CSW63 Friends of the African Union Women's Manual

The number of incarcerated women and girls in the US, while we comprise only 13% of the population, we comprise over 30% of incarcerated people. Black children are also nine times more likely than other children to have a parent who is imprisoned.

In the area of violence against women

There's a lack of data on police violence, there's also a gap in the data on sexual assault on women in general, and we know that black women's bodies are more vulnerable spaces in the home, in schools and in public places.

In the area of health

Depression among African American women is approximately 50% higher than among Caucasian women. Mental health problems are higher than average in black women because of psychological factors.

Foster Care

Black children make up more than 24% of foster care population but comprise only 14% of the US child population.

Poverty

According to the 2014 US census data, black families make up 27% of those living under the poverty line while only constituting 11% of the US population. Of the 23% of black families that live below the poverty line, 46% are in households headed by single mothers.

We know these facts are not a reason to say more mothers should be married, but are a consequence of our intersecting experience of progression.

Black women are also more than three times likely to die during childbirth than white women according to the Center for Disease Control.

In conclusion, the physical, social, economic, political, cultural, environmental and sexual violations faced by Afrodescendants in the United States are “symptoms” of the U.S.’ unwillingness to address the root causes of these issues – the history of enslavement and its interconnection with other systems such as patriarchy and capitalism. This interconnection of oppressive systems creates unique experiences of discrimination for afrodescendant women, girls, and trans and gender non-conforming people’s that warrant special and swift solutions led by those most directly impacted.

The CSW63 Friends of the African Union Women's Manual

The US Human Rights Network calls on the Commission to support and reiterate in its final report of the 63rd session the statement by the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights in its press release on March 21, 2016, which states – “The adoption of special measures is essential to reduce the disparities in the exercise of human rights by Afro-descendent persons and communities. It is also paramount that States adopt policies to reflect the needs of Afro-descendent women and girls and facilitate spaces where they can participate in the design of legislation, programs, and services pertinent to their lives and realities.”

Inter-American Commission on Human Rights (IACHR) Urges States to Adopt Measures to Protect the Rights of Afro-Descendent Women March 21, 2016

In commemoration of the International Day on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination, March 21st, the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights urges States to adopt affirmative action measures and comprehensive state policies to eradicate structural racial discrimination. In this sense, the Commission urges that States address by concrete means the situation of afro-descendent women, due to the multiple forms of discrimination they have suffered historically and still suffer on the basis of their sex, race, and other factors.

The IACHR expresses its concern over the situation of structural inequality the afro-descendent population faces in the hemisphere, due to the persistence of norms and institutional practices which challenge the full exercise of their basic political, economic, social, and cultural rights. The IACHR has highlighted that the overrepresentation of ethno-racial groups in the population most affected by poverty in the vast majority of countries in the region, the precariousness of the indicators relative to the basic conditions of dignified life such as the elevated rates of infant mortality, reduced life expectancy, lower income levels and the occupational level in comparison to the rest of the population reveals a situation of systemic discrimination. In this context, the situation of Afro-descendent women, adolescents and girls in the hemisphere is alarming.

A principal, autonomous body of the Organization of American States (OAS), the IACHR derives its mandate from the OAS Charter and the American Convention on Human Rights. The Inter-American Commission has a mandate to promote respect for human rights in the region and acts as a consultative body to the OAS in this area. The Commission is composed of seven independent members who are elected in an individual capacity by the OAS General Assembly and who do not represent their countries of origin or residence.

“A Strategic Plan for Gender Equality in Agribusinesses in Africa” Strategic Framework

I. Vision: To establish the framework for a consortium of businesses, research and educational institutions, government, nongovernmental organizations, and gender activities for the purpose of strengthening the innovation capacity in science and technology of women agricultural workers and market women to empower them as Collective Cultural Stakeholders in the design of policies, programs, and integrated planning for agri-business and agriculture-led national, regional and continental socioeconomic development.

II. Value Statement: We believe that women and their agricultural, economic, and marketing activities and skills will be the catalyst for the agro-industrialization of Africa.

III. Mission Statement: We are a consortium engaged in training, technology transfer, and investment for women agricultural workers and market women to empower them with innovative skills, ingenuity and insight to contribute to the formulation, implementation, and successful outcomes of development strategies to achieve the agro-industrialization of Africa.

The CSW63 Friends of the African Union Women's Manual

IV. Problem Identification: The innovative capacities in science and technology for women need to be strengthened so that national and regional industrialization development strategies can be centered on women's agricultural, economic, and marketing activities.

V. Overall Goal: To establish a consortium which builds the innovative capacities of women agricultural workers and market women so they can become viable Collective Cultural Stakeholders who will transform their livelihood, interests, and activities into the catalyst for integrated planning, programming, and policies for agri-businesses and agriculture-led development that will result in the agroindustrialization of Africa.

VI. Immediate Objective: To assemble key professionals, businesses, government officials, policymakers, organizations, institutions, activists, and allies, along with women agricultural workers, market women and to lay the foundation for the construction of the framework for the consortium during the course of 2019 and 2020.

VII. Key Result Areas: In order to achieve the immediate goal, the following will occur:

1. Host a Parallel Event at the 63rd Session of the United Nations Commission on the Status of Women during March 2019 in New York City which will be a symposium composed of presenters representing businesses, research and educational institutions, government officials, nongovernment organizations, women agricultural workers and market women to discuss the framework of the AFREECA including its mission, goals, and timeline for a consortium.
2. Host follow-up listening sessions on the framework of the AFREECA.
3. Host work sessions centered on the AFREECA.
4. Develop the framework for the AFREECA.
5. Host a Parallel Event at the 64th Session of the United Nations Commission on the Status of Women during March 2020 in New York City to finalize the framework for the AFREECA.
6. Sign a Memorandum of Agreement among partners of the consortium.
7. Implement AFREECA collaboration projects and linkage programs.

Dr. Janis C. Brooks of CEO of Children and Adults Developmental Agency Programs was moderator for CSW63 Parallel Event A Strategic Plan for Gender Equality in Agribusinesses in Africa”

Rev. Dr. Janis C. Brooks is a member of the Non-Governmental Organization (NGO) Commission on the Status of Women (CSW) New York United Nations and the United Nations National Council of Women of the United States. This year from March 11, 2019 to March 22, 2019 in New York is the anniversary of CSW63 at the United Nations. On March 15, 2019, Dr. Brooks is the facilitator and a presenter on a panel focused on Women and Agriculture hosted by New Future Foundation, Inc.

The topic she is presenting is entitled “Globally Empowering Women: The Impact of Chemicals, Toxicity & their Health in Agribusiness.” “Women are the backbone of the rural economy (especially in the developing world). About 23.5 million people live in food deserts, including 6.5 million children.” These staggering statistics assisted in the development of the conference title.

Dr. Brooks is a native of North Versailles, PA and earned her Ph.D. from the Graduate School of Public and International Affairs (GSPIA) at the University of Pittsburgh, an M.A. from the University of Maryland in Management in Urban Studies, and a B.S. from Clarion University in Secondary Education. Dr. Brooks is the founder and CEO of “Children and Adults Developmental Agency Programs (CADAprgrams),” and the founder of the defunct “Chemical Sensitivity Network.” She's the mother of two grown children and grandmother to four grandchildren. Dr. Brooks is a former Pastor. Dr. Brooks is being honored this month as one of the “Black History Makers” in the state of Pennsylvania.

She was the first in the State of Pennsylvania to conduct a major conference on the issue of Chemical Sensitivity at the University of Pittsburgh. As a result of her research, she made policy recommendations to the Pennsylvania State Legislature. Dr. Brooks will continue to raise awareness about chemicals and globalization among her peers, students, and at the local, federal and international levels.

Backgrounder: The Need for a Strategic Plan for Agro-Industrialization in Africa

Most developing nations have not placed agriculture at the center of their national development goals. They failed to grasp its crucial role to impact every aspect of socioeconomic development.

Cash crops and cash commodities were mainly used to secure foreign currency. Little attention or resources were given to developing agriculture, raw materials, and natural resources as the basis of agro-industrialization or manufacturing. Commodities were viewed as having value only in their raw state as an export product. This is natural because traditionally manufacturing was done in the industrialized nations. Most of the time, colonies were not allowed to engage in industrialization or manufacturing.

Colonies and developing nations mostly received finished goods. Therefore, the relationship between raw materials and manufactured consumer goods were not apparent. More so, what was not apparent was the role of experimentation, research, applied science and technology to invent new methods crucial to the industrialization process of consumer goods from agricultural products and raw materials. Presently, nations with vast natural resources and raw materials still export commodities without processing them for value added purposes.

For example, oil rich nations may have no refineries. Nations that grow cotton may have no textile mills and import large quantities of second hand clothes. Nevertheless, high commodity prices and exports of raw materials have supported the economic growth which Africa has experienced. Even, in recent decades, Africa's economic growth is mainly due to the export of natural resources to and loans from China. Most disturbingly though is that African nations have not used the revenues that they gained from economic growth as an opportunity to reinvest in their own quest for industrialization.

As a result, these nations remain economically dependent. Economic dependency has caused Africa to remain vulnerable in two major areas. First, Africa's economic growth is dependent upon the continued economic growth of industrialized nations; especially China. Economic growth in Africa is dependent upon its ability to be a stable and reliable source of natural resources. A downturn in global markets, slow growth in China, or a drop in the price of commodities would adversely affect the economies of Africa. Also, income from Africa's cash commodities would be negatively impacted if China finds other sources for commodities; particularly, in Asia.

Similarly, agro-industrialized nations could invent substitute products for natural raw materials and agricultural produce using science and technology in chemical engineering, such as a chemical substitute for chocolate. A fluctuation in prices of cash crops or cash commodities would reduce the intake of foreign currency. Africa would be unable to pay its loans to China, among other lending countries and entities.

The devastating result would be equal to Africa's massive debt owed to the west in the form of loans from the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund (IMF).

The second area where Africa is vulnerable is in food security.

There is some foreign direct investment in the agriculture sector. Africa exports half of its agriculture produce. Agricultural exports to China reportedly rose by 18 percent in 2017. While there is a considerable amount of food being exported, Africa does not produce enough food for its own consumption. Africa imports half of its food consumption mostly in the form of processed and packaged foods.

For example, it is reported that Nigeria, a coastal nation with rivers, imports $900 million of fish annually. The point is if there is a downturn in economic growth, the African middle class and other groups with disposable income would lose the money to purchase imported food. Due to economic dependency and underdevelopment, the agricultural sector would be unlikely to make up the difference needed to feed a large segment of the African population.

Food would still need to be exported for foreign currencies and to pay loans. The prospect of such a scenario is daunting. Nevertheless, it could become reality due to the condition of economic dependency. The impact of food price increases in 2007 through 2008 revealed the vulnerability of governments to civil unrest when large numbers within diverse economic classes are unable to afford food. Since the end of imperialism and colonialism, African nations have persisted with a policy of commodities-driven economic growth. Africa is not developing for its own needs. Despite its vast resources, an industrial revolution has yet to take off because Africa is fueling the industrialization of other nations rather than using its resources to fuel its own industrialization. Hence, there is a need to develop a strategic plan for the agro-industrialization of Africa.

Toward a Strategic Plan for the Agro-Industrialization of Africa World Bank Development Report 2007 indicates that the agriculture sector contributes to twenty-five percent of Gross Domestic Product (GDP) in Sub-Saharan Africa. Also, agriculture is an important contributor to foreign exchange earnings.

Africa is the perfect region for the development of agro-industrialization for several reasons.

First, Africa holds sixty percent of the world's uncultivated arable land. By means of technological inputs more land could be brought under cultivation and agricultural productivity could be doubled with irrigation and other water sources. Agrichemicals, hydroponics and greenhouses could add to the availability of land.

Second, Africa would prosper from targeted investment in agro-industrialization and manufacturing. Africa is the source of raw materials and natural resources. It would be more cost efficient to process resources and manufacture products in Africa where the natural resources exist. This would lower the prices of certain processed commodities and directly benefit African nations who pursue commodities driven growth.

Next, an agro-industrialization strategic plan is imperative to meet the needs of the African market. Africa imports $25 billion dollars of food annually. A steady supply of food made available for the intra-African market would lower food costs for African people across socioeconomic class lines. This would stabilize food prices. Africa would not be vulnerable to global fluctuations in the price of food. Instead of African spending money to import food, they could buy African produce. Billions of dollars could remain on the continent and circulate within the economies of Africa. This would add millions of wage earning jobs and support public projects. Africa would develop its own domestic markets.

Just as important, an agroindustrialization strategic plan would make Africa self sufficient in food and create food reserves necessary for food security throughout the continent. More significantly, Africa has a large rural population. The agriculture sector is a major source of food, income and livelihood for over sixty percent of the rural population in SubSaharan Africa. By focusing on agriculture led development, jobs, economic and educational opportunities would be created in the areas where most of the population already resides or have family connections so that they could easily return to rural areas.

In order to make socioeconomic development in the agriculture sector successful, agriculture would have to evolve along an agro-industrialization track and become integrated into a larger vision for rural development planning. The goal would be to make Africa a continent of prosperous and thriving sustainable rural communities. This vision would include job creation, education and technology institutions, and entrepreneurship for farmers and laborers via agribusiness incubators.

Agribusiness incubators could be setup for youths so that their experiences on the farm and off-farm jobs in preserving, processing, canning, drying and packaging food could lead to entrepreneurial opportunities and they could develop their own small scale farms or processing businesses for value added purposes and be included in the business supply chain. In addition, agro-industrialization could draw on indigenous knowledge for crop production and other components in the chain of production.

Sustainable rural communities could be the mainstay in Africa. The vision would include rural housing development, the construction of infrastructure with roads, railways and air transport, and service institutions such as banks, health facilities and food markets. Construction projects and public services would be paid for by business and individual taxes coupled with private investments and bonds from savings of workers with disposable income. Trained extension agents would assist subsistent farmers to cultivate a diverse crop for family and community food consumption. Moreover, women subsistent farmers could become small scale farmers. This would bring farmers and workers into the chain of production and increase the number of people who would earn wages or supplement their income so they can have disposable income to purchase manufactured goods and have access to services.

Agricultural production and mining without high tech machinery is labor intensive. Low skilled jobs could provide minimal income that could stay poverty for millions. Africa's large youth population could be employed as a part of national service. These low skilled jobs could be linked with vocational education and apprenticeships. They would eventually evolve into advanced technology vocational training as the agro-industrialization process and equipment become more mechanized. These training programs and institutions would lay the foundation for the education of the next generation.

Moreover, any strategic plan would have to be designed to directly impact gender equality. Although agro-industrialization has allowed more women to enter the wage labor force, the phenomenon has not had a great impact on gender equity.

Women are employed in pack houses and processing plants. However, they tend to work in more seasonal jobs, while men are in more permanent jobs. Agro-industrialization has had an impact on rural areas in nonfarm related jobs such as in manufacturing, construction, and social and economic support services. In rural areas of Africa, non-farm employment makes up only about 11 percent of the total rural workforce. Women comprise about a fourth of rural non-farm employment.

The CSW63 Friends of the African Union Women's Manual

It appears that in an industrial boom, women still remain economically marginalized (Dolan and Sorby, 2003).

An agro-industrialization strategic plan must design specific targets for women. These targets would include:

- ☐ Build the capacity of women subsistent famers to transition to small scale farmers.
- ☐ Pave the way for women to train in educational institutions so they could couple traditional methods and indigenous knowledge with science, technology, and innovation techniques.
- ☐ Create entrepreneurial opportunities for women to develop agribusinesses and become integrated in the agro-industrialization supply chain.
- ☐ Help women farmers boost quality and productivity so that they can demand more money for their crops.
- ☐ Train women to participate in off-farm related agribusinesses such as commodities traders and machinery retail sales.
- ☐ Train market women in financial services and give them access to investments.
- ☐ Assist women in training for jobs in rural and urban areas that service farmers
- ☐ Support women to become leaders in rural communities in government, financial, health, and telecommunication services.

Strategic planning would allow for women and youth overtime to participate in a variety of fields and positions within the scope of agro-industrialization this would ensure that participants are not confined to socioeconomic created classes, castes or gender specific jobs.

In addition, rural development planning of agro-industrialization would establish a network of rural markets that would not be dependent upon an extensive national or regional infrastructure and may be accessible even during the rainy seasons. Market women networks could be used to design a blueprint for such a network. In turn, the distribution routes would make available a steady supply of products for market women to sell. A strategic agro-industrialization plan would extend rural market networks to facilitate intra-Africa regional trade and cooperation. It would prioritize the development of markets on the African continent.

The CSW63 Friends of the African Union Women's Manual

In order to achieve this goal, the plan would focus on several areas. First, it would recommend the coordination of resources to establish regional industrial and manufacturing centers and agricultural production centers. These designated districts would have access to water and raw materials and be environmentally protected areas. Second, the strategic plan would use the agro-industrialization centers to coordinate with regional market centers and food hubs.

Industrial centers would provide manufacturing jobs and employ wage earners in higher skilled and higher paid jobs giving them greater disposable income to purchase goods and services. These hubs would serve as sources for wholesale and retail outlets. In addition, these regional centers would become distribution networks and the blueprint for rural development planning for the construction of infrastructure including roads, railways, air transport and pedestrian paths. Infrastructure jobs could then be created. These projects could lay a strong foundation to build an industrialized region and continent.

Lastly, the strategic plan would support the manufacturing centers with science and technology parks for research and product development. The emphasis on science, technology and innovation (STI) with research and development would strengthen African educational institutions at all levels. With a concentration on knowledge and training, all schools could be targeted to feed students to advanced technology centers. The science parks would emphasize biotechnology, chemical engineering, and the mechanization of specialized equipment. The parks could accommodate agribusiness incubators and similar startups. Also, they would have educational institutions and training centers. These educational centers would provide distant learning and online programs.

Hence, a strategic development plan for agro-industrialization would encompass Africa's development goals. It could fulfill the ambitious framework of the African Union's Agenda 2063 and the United Nations Sustainable Development Goals.

Over 300 representatives from the African Union Member States came together to participate in the Africa ministerial pre-consultative meeting for the 63rd Session of the Commission on the Status of Women (CSW63) held in Cairo, Egypt, on 5 February 2019.

Convened under the auspices of the African Union and with the support from UN Women, the objective of the ministerial pre-consultative meeting was to draw on the expertise of high-level representatives from governments in the region to elaborate recommendations that respond to the priorities of women and men from the Africa region to achieve gender equality and the empowerment of women and girls. The recommendations that emerged from the meeting will be subsequently taken forward by Member States attending CSW63 in New York in March.

Opening the event, Åsa Regnér, Assistant Secretary-General and Deputy Executive Director of UN Women, thanked Egypt, the host country of the meeting and current Head of the African Union, for its initiative in bringing together such a diverse group of experts and encouraged the participants to make solid commitments to advance women's access to public services, social protection and sustainable infrastructure. She also referred to the Multi-Stakeholder Forum for CSW63 held during the previous week in New York where recurrent calls were made to increase investments in gender responsive social protection, public services and sustainable infrastructure to free up women's time, support their mobility, enhance their access to economic opportunities and strengthen their resilience to shocks.

Citing the persistent gender gaps in access to social protection, she said, “women constitute the bulk of the 71 per cent of the world’s population with partial or no social protection coverage” and recalled the central role of public services in reducing poverty and inequality and in advancing the rights of women and girls. She said, “gender-responsive design and delivery of public services offer important opportunities for changing unequal power relations” and insisted that “social protection, public services and sustainable infrastructure must work in tandem to maximize their potential for promoting gender equality and women’s empowerment, and must come accompanied by macroeconomic and labour market policies that enhance job creation and livelihoods”.

Also speaking at the opening, Maya Morsy, President of the Egyptian National Council for Women said, “we believe that there are direct linkages between the implementation of the Agenda for Sustainable Development and the 2063 Agenda.

The new African Strategy for the Empowerment of Women and Gender Equality can contribute in setting our priorities and strengthening our strategic partnerships, by maximizing opportunities and inclusion of the social protection systems and the accessibility to public services and sustainable infrastructures for all women and girls.”

Speaking on behalf of Sameh Chokri, Minister of Foreign Affairs of Egypt, Ambassador Ahmed Ehab Gamal El Dine, Assistant Foreign Minister for Human Rights, Social and International Humanitarian Affairs, extended Egypt’s warm welcome to the distinguished participants and his best wishes for a successful meeting leading to a strong unified voice to promote a common agenda for Africa. He also underlined that hosting the Arab and African preparatory meetings back-to-back in the same city, provides further opportunities for sharing best practices between the two regions.

Ghada Waly, Minister of Social Solidarity of Egypt, also greeted the participants with a keynote address on the status of social protection in Egypt, sharing some of the country’s experience and achievements regarding the provision of social protection and safety nets, including the most recent conditional transfer schemes called Takaful and Karama and underlining how inclusive growth and macroeconomic stability are key enablers of social protection.

The Minister also cited the Social Accountability Committees that Egypt has established at the request of civil society organizations to increase transparency and accountability, and noted that that these social protection schemes empower women economically and socially by providing them direct access to cash support.

The CSW63 Friends of the African Union Women's Manual

“We believe that there are direct linkages between the implementation of the Agenda for Sustainable Development and the 2063 Agenda,” said Minister Waly. “The new African Strategy for the Empowerment of Women and Gender Equality can contribute in setting our priorities and strengthening our strategic partnerships, by maximizing opportunities and inclusion of the social protection systems and the accessibility to public services and sustainable infrastructures for all women and girls”.

Chantal Lopusa Safou, Minister of Gender, Children and Family of the Democratic Republic of Congo and Chairperson of the Bureau of the African Union Specialized Technical Committee on Gender Equality and Women's Empowerment, stressed the importance of governments' commitments to ensure the protection of women and girls. She said, “alone, one can go fast, but together we can go far”, and called on the participants to finalize an outcome document that will “represent our position as spokespeople for those women who still don't have a voice... The world is moving ahead and women and girls cannot stay on the margin.”

The two-day meeting provides an opportunity for participants to be briefed on the upcoming CSW63 and on the outcomes of the previous sessions, including the organization of the Committee, the members of its Bureau and on the key messages to inform Africa's technical contribution to the CSW63 Agreed Conclusions. Participants will also discuss and adopt the Africa CSW63 outcome document.

Within its mandate for advocacy and coordination of UN System and international support for peace, security, human rights and inclusive development in Africa, the Office of the Special Adviser on Africa (OSAA) places a special emphasis on gender equality and the empowerment of women.

Over the years, African Governments, regional and sub-regional organizations have made significant commitments towards gender equality and women's empowerment, including through:

- the Protocol to the African Charter on Human and Peoples' Rights on the Rights of Women in Africa \(2003\) , and
- the Solemn Declaration on Gender Equality in Africa \(2004\) .

We, FAU and NFF, are seeing an unprecedented number of denials of visas for women who are registered as U.N. NGO representatives for the CSW63 sessions, and who are residing outside the U.S.

We have discovered that the U.S. State Department in some consulates and embassies have been requiring such documents as marriage certificates, proof of property ownership, letters stating employment status, proof of finances and even proof of birth certificates or proof showing that they have children as part of the requirements needed for a visa to be issued in order attend these U.N. CSW63 Sessions.

We ask that the U.S. State Dept. create a uniform process at all embassies and consulates in order to streamline and standardize procedures and handling of these visas to ensure that our NGO colleagues who are registered through the extensive U.N. NGO process, are able to attend U.N. Commissions, meetings and conferences that take place here at the U.N. headquarters in New York City.

The U.S. obligation to admit foreign nationals, including NGO's, to the United States in order to participate at the U.N. is set forth in the U.N. Headquarters Agreement signed on June 26, 1947 by US Secretary of State George Marshall and U.N. Secretary General Trygve Lie. Section 11 of the Headquarters Agreement prohibits the U.S. from imposing any restrictions on NGOs' travel to or attendance at the U.N.

Queen Mother Dr. Deloris Blakely

In the U.N. Headquarters Agreement signed on June 26, 1947 by United States and the United Nations; Section 11 of the Headquarters Agreement prohibits the U.S. from imposing any restrictions on NGOs' travel to or attendance at the U.N. #CSW63 #CSW63QMM

We ask that the U.S. State Dept. create a uniform process at all embassies and consulates in order to streamline and standardize procedures and handling of these visas to ensure that our NGO colleagues who are registered through the extensive U.N. NGO process, are able to attend U.N. Commissions, meetings and conferences that take place here at the U.N. headquarters in New York City. It is crucial that Civil Society be allowed to participate at these important meetings and not be left behind in this process.

To that end a bus with over 2,000 signed petitions from CSW63 attendees will leave New York Thursday Morning to Washington DC with a Delegation led by the Chairwoman of New Future Foundation and the Senior FAU Queen Mother in our NFF CSO JV Queen Mother Dr. Deloris Blakely to petition the State Department and Congress on this issue. The #CSW53QMM

QueenMother has just left the United Nations Headquarters with a diverse delegation of 17 Women.

QueenMother and her delegation (#CSW63QMM) left at 7:45am after a prayer by Rev. Dionne P. Boissiere, MDiv. Chaplain, Chaplain of the Church Center for the United Nations, where she prayerfully encouraged the group of women to move forward in the "knowing" that this journey will be successful.

We are off to personally deliver the petitions that will accomplish the task of uniting women globally, encouraging civic participation and ultimately move through the political processes that increase awareness of the issues that critically impact our gender worldwide

FAU will assist the Queen Mother Mission (#CSW63QMM) over the next year the US State Department streamline and standardize procedures

The CSW63 Friends of the African Union Women's Manual

In 2012 FAU adopted the following Ten Operational Principles (as amended in 2016):

1. We support the constitution of the United States of America (USA) and the African Union (AU), its constitutive act and the history and acts of the AU's predecessor organization the Organization of African Unity (OAU).
2. We support the recognition of the African Diaspora globally and legally by the AU based on actions in 2005 of the African Union Assembly when it defined the African Diaspora as "... peoples of African descent and heritage living outside the continent, irrespective of their citizenship, and who remain committed to contribute to the development of the continent and the building of the African Union".
3. We support application worldwide of the United Nations (UN) Universal Declaration of Human Rights.
4. We support the UN's Sustainable Development Goals (2015), the AU's Africa 2063 Plan for Africa (2013), the economic-social uplift of Africans on the continent and in the African Diaspora as well the work of the AU in regards to increasing trade between African Nations, and will incorporate the work of the International Year for People of African Descent (2011) as designated by the UN and Organization of American States and the UN's International Decade for People of African Descent (2015).
5. We support the strategy and agenda of the AU Economic, Social and Cultural Council (ECOSOCC) and through organization of African American Civil Society we support the AU Assembly five legacy projects (2012) and continuing efforts to strengthen the Global African Diaspora Initiatives of the AU.
6. We support Peace, Security and basic human dignity within Africa and around the globe, with an emphasis on stopping slavery in the AU nations and in the African Diaspora.
7. We support the organization of African and peoples of African descent's self-interest and uplift through a committee structure and take responsibility for organizing such in the United States of America.
8. We support the African Growth and Opportunity Act (AGOA) of 2000 and seek the creation of a new plan between the United States of America and the African Union that is supportive of the African Diaspora in the USA and would be sustainable not only in Africa but also in the host countries of the African Diaspora. We do this based on usage of sovereign based public private partnerships.
9. We support political empowerment of Africans as individual citizens and in free associations on cooperation and solidarity in the continent and in the Diaspora.

The CSW63 Friends of the African Union Women's Manual

10. We support the creation of a company called the African American Diaspora Holding Company & Investment Trust which will create financial solutions through the US Federal Reserve and its banks.

We will be updating these Operating Principles by May 25th 2019.

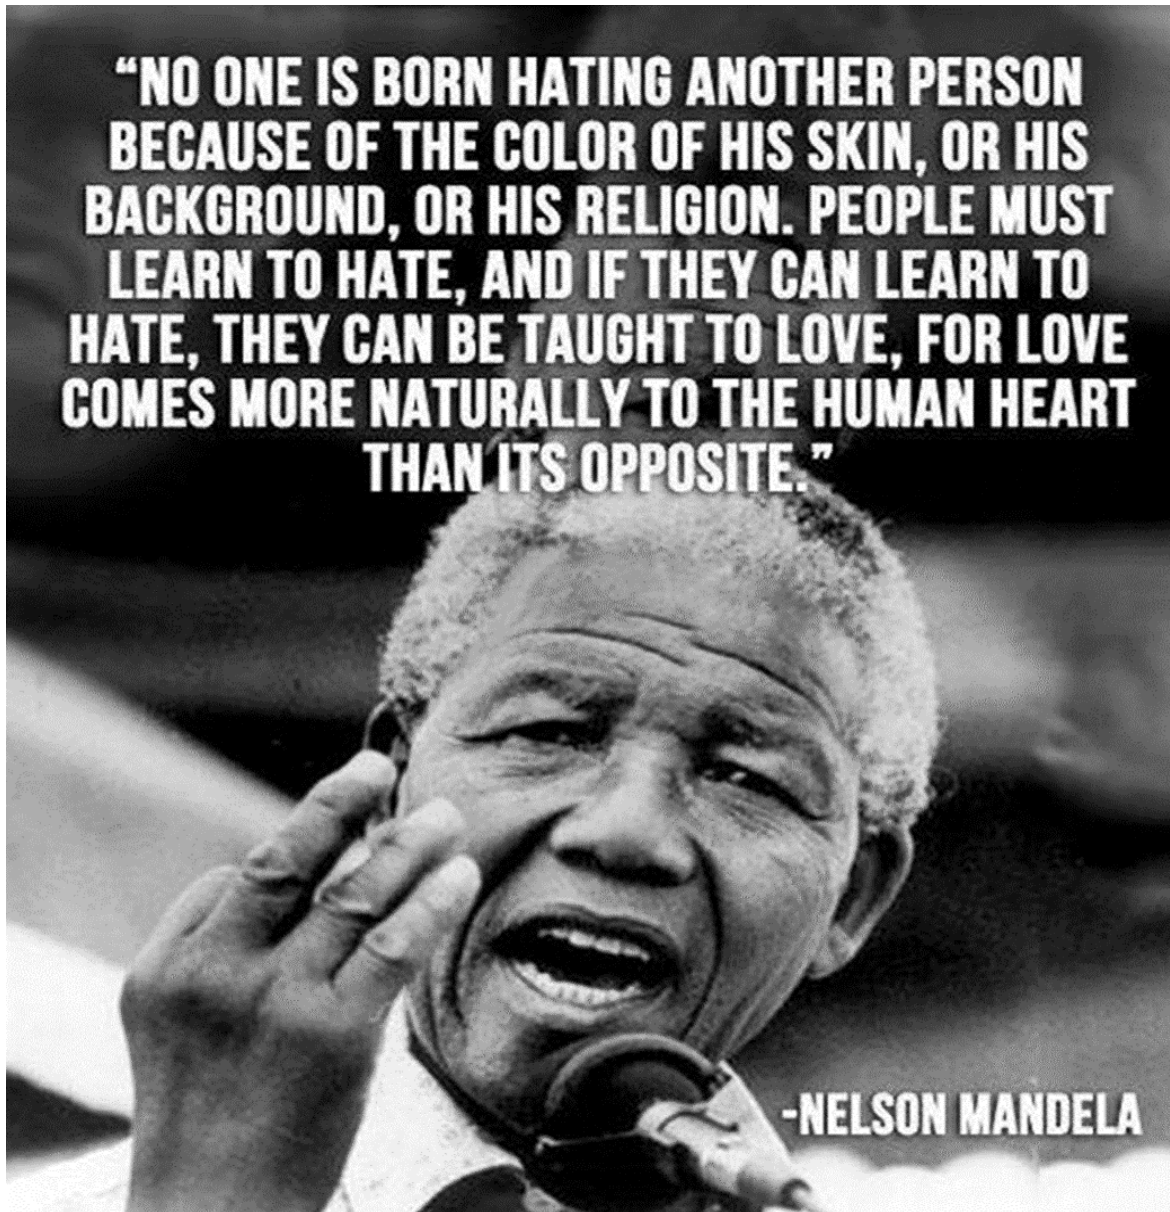

On December 25th 2018, FAU began to offer global programming in seven focus areas:

- (1) developing intergenerational community wealth;
- (2) business development that erases the digital divide and builds wealth for economically disadvantaged people;
- (3) next-generation civic infrastructure with governance at the neighborhood level;
- (4) comprehensive Internet of Everything based education;
- (5) healthcare system solutions that effectively serve the entire population;
- (6) combating racism through economic development; and,
- (7) human rights development using the UN's Universal Periodic Review process.

Over its existence (2012-2019) FAU has recruited allies (including Native American and African tribal groups), built an affiliate structure with national country bureaus, state assemblies, and local chapters, and lined up resources. FAU and its allies are signatories to some $90B worth of bank-based Community Benefit Agreements.

FAU as a civil society organization operates under relevant international human rights instruments, in particular the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination, will be used to address problems such as the past history of institutionalized racism in the USA through the #2019BlackFolksPlan. We do so bearing in mind that the United States of America, a founding member of the United Nations (UN) and the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, practiced from its formation, in its constitution of 1788, human slavery.

Within a 9-month period that started December 25th 2018 FAU will propose by May 25th 2019 a solution to the results of the fundamental injustice, cruelty, brutality, and inhumanity of that human slavery that was legal from 1788 to 1865 (77 years). In 1868 the freed slaves, African nationals and those born in the USA and other persons in the USA were given citizenship through the 14th Amendment to the aforementioned US Constitution. Now we rejoin our African Brothers and Sisters in creating solutions which leverage our $1.2T GDP in the USA using a cyber currency platform.

The African Dollar will be built on a system that is intended be a very broad programming platform where a FAU Chamber of Commerce member acting as a developer can build games, financial applications, gambling apps, insurance products, social networks, and pretty much everything we already use today.

However, as a currency platform it will be gold backed and is to be run off a decentralized system with a shared ledger system based on a fork of Blockchain technology with embedded MDi/GLINC solutions that make the system what we will call ULTRA SECURE.

The FAU Global African American Stimulus Plan will use the African Dollar System so as to provide African Dollar ULTRA SECURE Payment Solutions at a million locations by 2020. We would start in 20 states with the $62.6 in established Bank Community Benefit Agreements.

The African Diaspora Directorate (ADD) is to be a new unit of FAU designed to serve as a catalyst to facilitate the involvement of African Diasporan peoples around the world in the affairs of the Africa Union. ADD is proposed to have four divisions (1) the Secretariat of the African Diaspora's Economic, Social and Cultural Council (2) the Civil Society Division (3) Diaspora Division and the (4) Operations Division. The African Diaspora's Economic, Social and Cultural Council, which is composed of civil society organizations (CSOs) and non-state organs is to be established in the USA by August 25th 2019.

The creation of the ADD Operations Division coincides with a Big Data Revolution that has the capacity to both uplift and injure people of African descent, both individually and systemically. This division will work, in 2019, with The Working Group of Experts of the People of African Descent to examine aspects of these issues, facilitate public debate, and promote engagement by varied stakeholders with a focus on Hamilton County Ohio in the United States.

We will use an in-depth study of Hamilton County Ohio to create a framework to study the human rights situation of people of African descent in the United States of America.

We address the question in the United Nations Concept Note 24th Session of the Working Group of Experts on People of African Descent 25-29 March 2019 in its Request for data-guidance note, "What data, analysis and studies exist on the composition of the population; the human rights situation; and on measures to address racial disparities and provide redress and remedy for racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia, Afrophobia and related intolerance and historical injustices constituting crimes against humanity." using these sources"

In part we chose Hamilton County based on the 2017 establishment of the Commission on Women and Girls whose mandate includes the ability to “make recommendations to the Board of County Commissioners and local government jurisdictions to eliminate any distinction, exclusion, or restriction made on the basis of sex, which has the effect or purpose of impairing or nullifying the recognition, enjoyment or exercise by women, irrespective of marital status, on the basis of equality between men and women, of human rights or fundamental freedom in the political, economic, social, cultural, civil, or any other field.”

We plan to tie the Commission into CSW64 through our actions which include creating a expanded chapter of the UN Association of Greater Cincinnati with a Women's Caucus.

The CSW63 Friends of the African Union Women's Manual

FAU plan based on the Hamilton County Commission on Women and Girls Report and Recommendations of October 11, 2018 to the Board of County Commissioners & Community entitled "A Seat at the Table" is to tie it to our analysis and studies exist on the human rights situation of the over 100,000 women of African Descent in the county and on measures to address racial disparities to them and provide means of redress and remedy for the racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia, Afrophobia and related intolerance and historical injustices that may constitute crimes against humanity, under United Nations standards and in line with the 2015 United Nations Human Rights Council Universal Periodic Review of the USA.

At the time of the reports issuance in 2018 this is its composition.

From the Executive Summary. We find ourselves at a moment in time for women in society. All around us, in the news, on social media, and even in the streets, women are making their voices heard, but real & sustained change only comes when women have a seat at the table.

"It is exciting to install this impressive group to the Commission on Women and Girls," says Commission President Denise Driehaus, who proposed the creation of a Women and Girls Commission early last year. "They will build on the initiatives of the first Commission and add their perspective and enthusiasm to the work."

According to Denise Driehaus (Twitter @DeniseDriehaus) Jan 17 At tonight's meeting, the @HamiltonCntyOH BOCC (Hamilton County Board of County Commissioners) is appointing 20 new members of the Commission on Women and Girls

The Hamilton County Commission on Women and Girls is unique among similar initiatives in other cities because a third of its members are students under the age of 18. Newly installed Commissioner Stephanie Summerow Dumas joined Commission President Denise Driehaus yesterday in welcoming incoming appointees. "Whenever we have an opportunity to empower women or girls, we need to take it," she said. "This commission is a vehicle to make that happen."

"My parents always told me that I can do anything that I put my mind to if I work hard.

I imagine that's why I became a licensed social worker, mayor, village manager, author, president/ceo and mental-health administrator." ".....In first grade I knew that my mission was to advocate for other people. The teacher asked the entire class what would they like to have for Christmas. Everyone answered something for themselves. I was the only one to answer that I wanted something for all the children in the world. Needless to say I won the prize and I've been advocating for others ever since. I saw the political arena as another way to advocate."

The United Nations General Assembly proclaimed (resolution 68/237) , 23 December 2013, as the International Decade for People of African Descent citing the need to strengthen national, regional and international cooperation in relation to the full enjoyment of economic, social, cultural, civil and political rights by people of African descent, and their full and equal participation in all aspects of society, starting on 1 January 2015 and ending on 31 December 2024,

As proclaimed by the United Nations General Assembly, the theme for the International Decade is “People of African descent: recognition, justice and development.” The main UN objectives of the International Decade are as follows:

- Promote respect, protection and fulfilment of all human rights and fundamental freedoms by people of African Descent, as recognized in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights;
- Promote a greater knowledge of and respect for the diverse heritage, culture and contribution of people of African descent to the development of societies;
- Adopt and strengthen national, regional and international legal frameworks according to the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action and the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination and to ensure their full and effective implementation.
- Requests States and encourages relevant human rights bodies, organs and mechanisms of the United Nations, specialized agencies, funds and programmes, international, regional, subregional and non-governmental organizations, including organizations of people of African descent, national human rights institutions and other stakeholders to develop and implement specific action-oriented activities in their areas of competence

The implementation of the programme of activities of FAU for the International Decade is meant to be an integral part of the full and effective implementation of the Durban Declaration and Programme of Action and in compliance with the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination as a principal instruments for the elimination of racism, racial discrimination, and related intolerance.

In 2019 FAU USA Bureau will coordinate a meeting, for the African Diaspora in the United States of America, like this meeting held in November 2017 in Geneva Switzerland as an opportunity to engage with people of African descent on appropriate and effective measures to halt and reverse the lasting consequences of slavery, the slave trade and the transatlantic slave trade in captured African people and, to this end, ensure the participation of and consultation with non-governmental organizations, other stakeholders and civil society at large with the participation of experts from UN bodies, civil society organizations and academia, in the framework of the implementation on the International Decade for People of African Descent.

We do this as part of the strongest GDP African Diasporic Community, $1.2T USD.

In their outcome document they made these statements that we agree with:

....reaffirmed the principles of equality and non-discrimination in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and encouraged respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms for all without distinction of any kind such as race, colour, sex, language, religion, political or other opinion, national or social origin, property, birth or other status.

..... underlined the importance of the full implementation of the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination and its universal ratification as a central and effective instrument to address racial discrimination affecting people of African descent.

..... recognized that, despite the progress achieved, racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance persist in all regions of the world and continue to impact significantly people of African descent, which leads in many cases to an multiple and intersecting forms of inequality and discrimination, including in the fields of education, employment, housing, health, justice and political participation.

The CSW63 Friends of the African Union Women's Manual

.....expressed their concern at the material progression of racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance, including their contemporary forms and manifestations, such as the use of the new information and communications technologies, including the Internet, to disseminate ideas of racial superiority. They also reiterated their condemnation of the persistence and resurgence of neo-Nazism, neo-Fascism and violent nationalist ideologies based on racial or national prejudice and they restated that these phenomena can never be justified in any instance or in any circumstances.

..... recognize the value and diversity of the cultural heritage of people of African descent and to ensure their full integration into social, economic and political life with a view to facilitating their full participation at all levels in the decision-making process;

..... to ensure that people of African descent have full access to effective protection and remedies through the competent national tribunals and other State institutions against any acts of racial discrimination, and the right to seek from such tribunals just and adequate reparation or satisfaction for any damage suffered as a result of such discrimination;

..... to combat effectively prejudices and harmful and wrongful stereotypes which may lead to racism, racial discrimination, xenophobia and related intolerance and, in this regard, to implement educational, cultural and awareness-raising programs aiming at promoting a greater knowledge of and respect for the diverse heritage, culture and contribution of people of African descent to the development of societies while stressing the importance that textbooks and other educational materials reflect historical facts accurately as they relate to past tragedies and atrocities, in particular slavery, the slave trade, the transatlantic slave trade and colonialism.”

..... continued engagement to dialogue in an open, constructive and transparent manner with all relevant stakeholders, particularly with States from Africa and other regional groups, with regard to the implementation of the programme of activities of the International Decade for People of African Descent, including on the establishment of a Forum to serve as a consultation mechanism”

The CSW63 Friends of the African Union Women's Manual

On December 25th, 2018, FAU implemented a 9-month process that will finish on August 25th, 2019 of defining its seven global programming offerings: (1) developing intergenerational community wealth; (2) business development that erases the digital divide and builds wealth for economically disadvantaged people; (3) next-generation civic infrastructure with governance at the neighborhood level; (4) comprehensive Internet of Everything based education; (5) healthcare system solutions that effectively serve the entire population; (6) combating racism through economic development; and (7) human rights development using the UN's Universal Periodic Review process.

Friends of the African Union believes that we are in the era of the fourth industrial revolution—a revolution in intelligence. Massive increases in computing power and data management; the growing use of robotics; and the developments in artificial intelligence and machine learning all characterize this revolution. Our aim with our solution is to bring that revolution to African Americans through regional public-private partnerships (P3) and using federal government law and government incentives.

It will be a solution that will be a stimulus to the American Economy that -

(1) is judicious & addresses solutions to lead poisoning in 7M African American dwellings;

(2) answers under the control of our Federal Executive Branch to the statements in the interagency response set forth by the US State Department to the United Nations Universal Periodic Review of the USA in 2015 that said “Civil Rights, Ethnic, & Racial Discrimination” is the number one human rights problem in the USA;

(3) draws on already established federal government authority, expanded community benefit agreements, market infrastructure, industry standards and public-private partnership law at the federal, state and local level;

(4) helps other American citizens through indirect associations by the creation of supportive ancillary jobs & business opportunities thereby supporting the advancement of the American people as a whole, and;

(5) is just adequate enough to implement real changes that reverse long-standing conditions caused by systemic de jure and de facto racial and economic discrimination against Americans of African heritage, as documented in depth elsewhere, that provides a means from 2019 to 2169 to address these issues with the creation of a 150-year debt purchasing program (The Daniels IDIQ4) in a community reinvestment act based public-private partnerships to do so.”

The Universal Periodic Review (UPR) is a unique process which involves a periodic review of the human rights records of all 193 UN Member States. The UPR is a significant innovation of the Human Rights Council which is based on equal treatment for all countries. It provides an opportunity for all States to declare what actions they have taken to improve the human rights situations in their countries and to overcome challenges to the enjoyment of human rights. The UPR also includes a sharing of best human rights practices around the globe. Currently, no other mechanism of this kind exists.

FAU created a business process solutions for our answer in 2014.

Universal Periodic Review of the United States

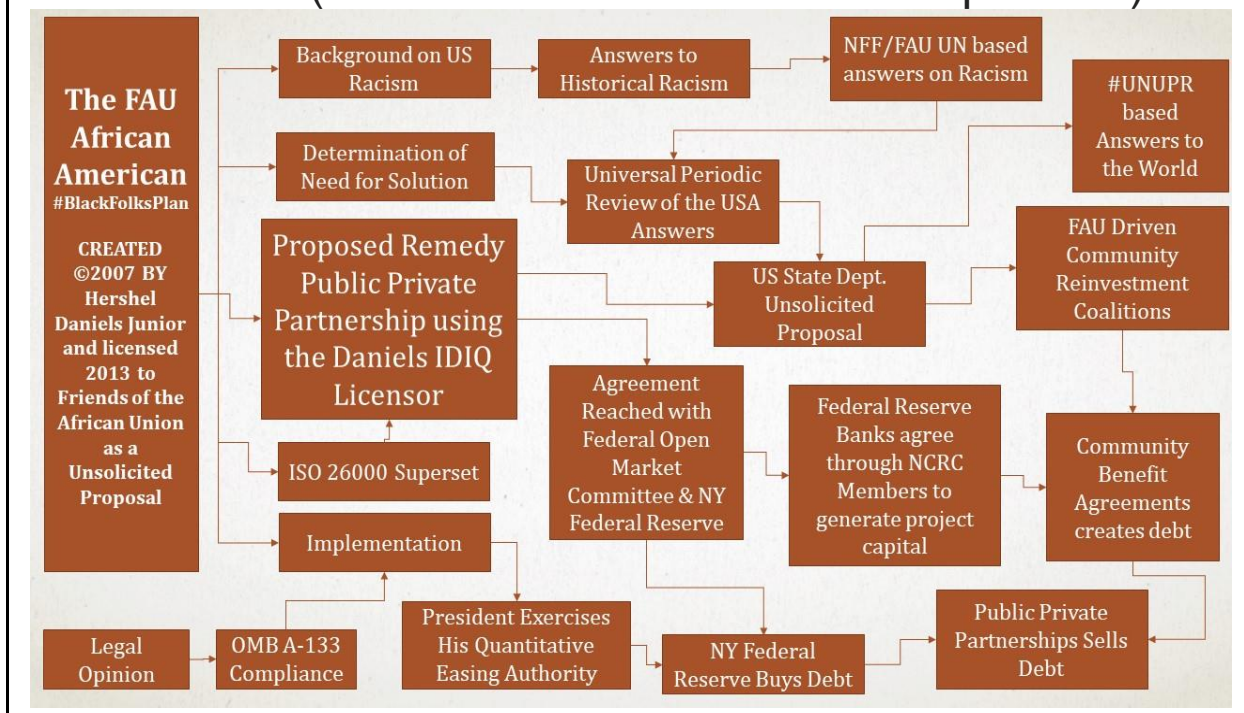

FAU concentrated on civil rights, ethnic, and racial discrimination against the 40m Americans who are descendants of American slavery

Universal Periodic Review of the United States in 2015 where our 2014 Civil society joint venture submission was based on United Nations protocols used by the United Nations Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights and responsive of the 10 areas of human rights focus as put forth by the US State Department. These are (1) civil rights, ethnic, and racial discrimination; (2) criminal justice issues; (3) indigenous issues; (4) national security; (5) immigration; (6) labor and trafficking; (7) economic, social and cultural rights and measures; (8) the environment; (9) domestic implementation of human rights, and; (10) treaties and international human rights mechanisms.

FAU was established by American citizens, some are veterans and all where born of historic American slavery of Africans. It is a global economy of over 28 million human beings in 2014. Modern slavery has a history dating back to the 13th century.

The business solution we designed used funding from the $16T USD in debt purchasing authority of the President of the United States through the Federal Reserve (in 2019 we have modified the process)

Friends of the African Union December 10th 2017 International Human Rights Day Declaration Update #1

Sixty-nine years ago today, in the aftermath of World War II, the United Nations (UN) General Assembly adopted the Universal Declaration of Human Rights so that governments who are signatures to it will recognize and elevate the inherent dignity and equal and inalienable rights of all persons on this planet, and that these 30 rights can be the foundation of freedom, justice, and peace in the world. Friends of the African Union believes that the world is safer when every person can live up to his or her full potential, and every nation is free from tyranny.

The Universal Declaration of Human Rights can be a beacon of hope for those who are caught in or displaced by internal unrest, or who are fighting against repressive governments and or being exploited for the profit of others,. Friends of the African Union main human rights tools is the Universal Periodic Review and the creation of community benefit agreements with financial technology that address the affected class of people.

The UN Human Rights Council (HRC) Universal Periodic Review (UPR) is a unique process which involves a review of the human rights records of all UN Member States. The UPR is a State-driven process, under the auspices of the HRC, which provides the opportunity for each State to declare what actions they have taken to improve the human rights situations in their countries and to fulfill their human rights obligations. As one of the main features of the Council, the UPR is designed to ensure equal treatment for every country when their human rights situations are assessed. It allows civil society to participate, so that viewpoint of the voice of the people are elevated to address human rights problems on the global stage.

Standing up for human rights and democracy is a Friends of the African Union policy priority that represents the best modern traditions of our country. We say this bearing in mind that the United States of America (USA), a founding member of the UN, signature to the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, and a member of the current UN Human Rights Council, practiced from its formation, in its constitution of 1788, human slavery. It was legal in the USA from 1788 to 1865. In 1868 the freed slaves and other persons in the USA were given citizenship through the 14th Amendment to the aforementioned US Constitution. Then the USA's federal government practiced institutionalized racism from 1868 to 1965 on Americans of African Descent. We will never forget that America became a world power through slavery, but through the UPR we can address past wrongs done to the descendants of American Slavery so as to Make America Great Again - this time benefiting African Americans.

To do that FAU will address the US Government's response to the interagency task force convened by the US State Department to the UN Universal Periodic Review of the USA in 2015 (#UNUPR), It was , based on United Nations protocols used by the United Nations Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights in the UPR process, were the USA did create 10 areas of human rights focus. These included (1) civil rights, ethnic, and racial discrimination, as the number 1 human rights problem in the USA; (2) criminal justice issues; (3) indigenous issues; (4) national security; (5)immigration; (6) labor and trafficking; (7) economic, social and cultural rights and measures; (8) the environment; (9) domestic implementation of human rights, and; (10) treaties and international human rights mechanisms. We do so by creating community benefit agreements through the creation of a public private partnerships that can address problems in human rights identified by the UPR process.

In commemoration of International Human Rights Day, we renew our commitment to our core democratic values in our republic and to advocating for the human rights, freedom, and dignity of all people, worldwide, using the UPR process. In the USA, in 2018, we will do this as an unsolicited proposal for the US Government to provide a solution to the number one human rights problem in the USA - "Civil Rights, Ethnic, & Racial Discrimination" that is focused on the economic inequality that has affected the decedent people of American Slavery.

We will demonstrate such a program starting in Cincinnati Ohio then other Ohio cities including Columbus, Canton, Cleveland, Lincoln Heights and Dayton along with New York City, Washington DC, and Los Angeles Ca.. We will use as our model the work we have done in Cincinnati including being a participant in the Center for Constitutional Rights 2004 report on the Cincinnati's Boycott, the Cincinnati Empowerment Zone, Plan Cincinnati, The Child Poverty Collaborative, The Black Agenda for Cincinnati, the Greater Cincinnati Community Reinvestment Coalition as well as the refresh of the Cincinnati Collaborative Agreement. This will all be part of a comprehensive plan of action in creating a regional community benefit agreement that addresses the needs of the region based on the Universal periodic Review of the USA and the Sustainable Development Goals of the United Nations as applied to the region. We will do this with a new, in 2018, greater Cincinnati UN Association chapter.

The CSW63 Friends of the African Union Women's Manual

Preamble

Our African Civil Society history includes the transatlantic slave trade

The transatlantic slave trade was the largest forced migration in history, and undeniably one of the most inhumane. The extensive exodus of Africans spread to many areas of the world over a 400-year period and was unprecedented in the annals of recorded human history.

As a direct result of the transatlantic slave trade, the greatest movement of Africans was to the Americas — with 96 per cent of the captives from the African coasts arriving on cramped slave ships at ports in South America and the Caribbean Islands.

From 1501 to 1830, four Africans crossed the Atlantic for every one European, making the demographics of the Americas in that era more of an extension of the African diaspora than a European one. The legacy of this migration is still evident today, with large populations of people of African descent living throughout the Americas.

Commemorating the memory of the victims

In commemoration of the memory of the victims, the General Assembly, in its resolution 62/122 of 17 December 2007, declared 25 March the International Day of Remembrance of the Victims of Slavery and the Transatlantic Slave Trade, to be observed annually.

The resolution also called for the establishment of an outreach programme to mobilize educational institutions, civil society and other organizations to inculcate in future generations the “causes, consequences and lessons of the transatlantic slave trade, and to communicate the dangers of racism and prejudice.

We, Friends of the African Union and aligned Civil Society Organizations are now in that period of the International Decade for People of African Descent through 2024 with action led by African Civil Society based on the proposed Africa Week 2017 wrap up Agreement, see Agreement with African Civil Society and peoples, based on supporting an Integrated, Prosperous, People-Centered and Peaceful Africa.

Proposed Agreement with African Civil Society and African Peoples

NOW during the United Nations Africa Week 2017 sponsored by the Office of the Special Adviser on Africa (OSAA) who supports the work of civil society organizations, like Friends of the African Union (FAU) and New Future Foundation (NFF), through the publication of a number of reports highlighting their contributions to addressing issues

ACKNOWLEDGE of the importance to the African Diaspora of the establishment of The Economic, Social and Cultural Council (ECOSOCC) under the provision of Articles 5 and 22 of the Constitutive Act;

ACKNOWLEDGING ECOSOCC Statutes, adopted by the AU Assembly in July 2004, define it as an advisory organ composed of different social and professional groups of AU Member States (Assembly/AU/Dec.48 (III)). The first ECOSOCC General Assembly was formally launched on 9 September 2008 in Dar es Salaam, UR of Tanzania.

RECALLING in 2014 the Friends of the African Union joined with the New Future Foundation on Sept. 15th 2014 to submit a solution to institutionalized federal racism in the United States of America as part of the United Nations Human Rights Commission Universal Periodic Review of the United States of America. Our submission was based on United Nations protocols used by the United Nations Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights and based on the 10 areas of human rights focus as put forth by the US State Dept.. These included (1) civil rights, ethnic, and racial discrimination; (2) criminal justice issues; (3) indigenous issues; 4) national security; (5)immigration; (6) labor and trafficking; (7) economic, social and cultural rights and measures; (8) the environment; (9) domestic implementation of human rights, and; (10) treaties and international human rights mechanisms. Our solution uses Quantitative Easing as its main tool. Quantitative easing (QE) is an unconventional monetary policy used by a central bank, in the case of FAU USA the US Federal Reserve System, to stimulate an economy when standard monetary policy has become ineffective. A central bank implements quantitative easing by buying specified amounts of financial assets from commercial banks and other private institutions, thus raising the prices of those financial assets and lowering their yield, while simultaneously increasing the monetary base.

ACKNOWLEDGING that the Universal Periodic Review “has great potential to promote and protect human rights in the darkest corners of the world.” – Ban Ki-moon, UN Secretary-General. The Universal Periodic Review (UPR) is a unique process which involves a review of the human rights records of all UN Member States. The UPR is a State-driven process, under the auspices of the Human Rights Council, which provides the opportunity for each State to declare what actions they have taken to improve the human rights situations in their countries and to fulfill their human rights obligations. As one of the main features of the Council, the UPR is designed to ensure equal treatment for every country when their human rights situations are assessed.

KNOWLEDGABLE of the Structure of the United Nations, the African Union, the African Development Bank, The New Partnership for Africa's Development (NEPAD), the World Bank and the government of the United States as well as public and private sector finance do hereby commit to do this work so as to encourage the Diaspora to organize our self in a global network and to establish appropriate mechanisms that will enable our increasing participation in the affairs of the African Union as observers and eventually, in the future, as a sixth region of the continent that would contribute substantially to the implementation of policies and programmes.

2017 Friends of the African Union et. al.

On 28 March 2019 FAU will join civil society gathering to discuss role of memorials in educating about the history of Transatlantic Slave Trade and contributions of people of African descent. We do as the United Nations Department of Global Communications will host and moderate a briefing for non-governmental organizations (NGOs) and the public, entitled “The role of memorials in preserving history”, on 28 March 2019, from 11:00 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. in the Economic and Social Council (ECOSOC) Chamber. Organized by the Remember Slavery Programme in partnership with the NGO Relations, Advocacy & Special Events Section, the event will bring together architects, curators and experts of African and Caribbean heritage to discuss how best to preserve, promote and manage sites of memory. Speakers will include representatives of three slavery memorials and the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO), as well as a youth representative

2019 Theme: "Remember Slavery: The Power of the Arts for Justice"

Since the time of the Transatlantic Slave Trade, the arts have been used to confront slavery, empower enslaved communities and honour those who made freedom possible. They have also been vital tools in commemorating past struggles, highlighting ongoing injustices and celebrating the achievements of people of African descent. The 2019 theme therefore draws attention to the many examples of artistic expression – including memorials, music, dance and architecture – that have helped us to remember the history and consequences of the Transatlantic Slave Trade.

On Monday March 25th 2019

Friends of the African Union will commemorate International Day of Remembrance of Victims of Slavery and Transatlantic Slave Trade in Cincinnati, Ohio.
